

If I Could Change the World

– Stephanie Ng (L7) -

26th Feb 08

If I could change the world, I would change myself first. I would be a good citizen as well as a filial daughter and a diligent student.

Being a good citizen, I think there are many criteria. I would duly pay tax and abide by all laws. I would report crime instantly and actively participate in more charitable events. I would do my best to better the society.

As a daughter, I would always listen and obey my parents and not be rebellious! I would remind myself to remain placid instead of arguing with my parents or other family members in times of conflict amongst us. As the saying goes, "Charity begins at home".

As I am still a student, it is only natural for my parents to have high academic expectations regarding my studies. They would also want me to do just as well in sports where swimming is my forte. Therefore, I would always strive for the best in everything I do, reminding myself to always work hard!

I hope that by initially changing myself, I would be able to influence others and hopefully change the entire world eventually. It would be simply superb if the world would become a more beautiful and harmonious society, irrespective of culture, race and background.