

If I were the School Principal

- Ting Ting Sham (L4) -

3rd July 08

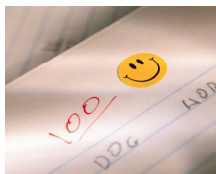

I would be very excited if I were the school principal because the students would not have that much homework, no writing, no class work and no math worksheets. There must be lots of children who would like to study in this school, but their parents might not let them.

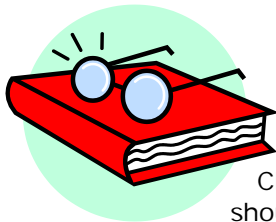

Every student or teacher would not need to wake up that early because school would start at 8:30am and would end at 12:30pm. My school would teach the students to play games and go some math. The children would learn how to type on the computer and play internet games.

Everyone would need to do online assignments and there would be worksheets for reading. The classes would have two hours of recess every day, during which students could choose to do climbing, two square, board games and lots more.

All teachers would be funny, silly and humorous. Teachers and students would have story time together. Students would be required to read. Reading is fun but some might not like it. I would have them read books suitable for their age because if I did not, they would try to read really hard books and not understand the contents. This way students would not really learn and improve much.

Summer holiday would be for about two months. CNY holiday would be for a whole week. Easter would also be a week while Christmas holiday would be for two to three weeks. I think all kids should have a longer time to play in between term breaks.

I think this would be a great plan and I think I would be the most popular school principal ever!

